Artist

Working artists run into many obstacles today, but some become successful by their own definitions because of those blocks. The artists who made our The Best of the Best list for 2011 represent a spectrum of excellence. Rosalind Cook's bronze sculptures reveal her spirit. Otto Duecker's realistic paintings of photos taped against backgrounds charm the eye, while Leonard Wren's impressionistic landscapes take viewers beyond Tulsa city limits.

Drum roll, please! Each year, Oklahoma Magazine polls its readers to determine who and what stands out among a crowded field of competitors. And every year you overwhelm us with your responses. This year was no different; thousands of votes have been cast and counted, and the results are in. Congratulations are in order. Ladies and gentlemen – The Best of the Best 2011.

Results of The Best of the Best were determined by online voting conducted from Jan. 1 - March 15, 2011.* Separate ballots were provided for readers in the Tulsa and Oklahoma City areas. The top three entities receiving the most votes in each category for each city were named The Best of the Best.

*This is not a scientific study, and results should not be viewed as an official endorsement or statement of quality on behalf of Oklahoma Magazine.
